“ Liz Reading lit a candle in memory of Clara June Swank

“ There was a point in my life that I had no where to go and Clara took me in. I had been told that I was worthless and ugly and stupid. Clara told me that I was valuable, smart and beautiful. She invited me into her life and into her home. She took care of me and protected me. She listened as I shared my heartbreak, anger, and fear. When I was horrified to have a baby, because I had been told that if you are abused as a child, you will abuse your own child. She sat down and talked me through it. She let me know that the people that face what happened to them, and work through it, are the ones least likely to abuse their children. I can't count the times that she made me feel like I was someone that mattered. She didn't care what I looked like or what I did. She loved me anyway. I had never experienced this before. She believed in me and she fought for me. What a feisty lady. I never saw her back down from anything she believed in. In part, I owe where I am today, to Clara. She has and will always have a piece of my heart. She inspired me to be the best I can be and to go after what I believe in. She showed me that I could be tough, yet still be a lady. We lost a treasure the day dear Clara left this world. She will be missed, but always remembered.
