Connie lived the first half of her life in the Texas and Oklahoma panhandle areas until 1967. Connie graduated from Darrouzett, Texas, High School in 1939. Connie learned to cook feeding farm hands in the area. When she cooked, there was always an abundance of good, filling country food ending with some of the best pies ever. The family owned and operated a grocery store in Darrouzett for several years. She belonged to the United Methodist Church and Eastern Star and was a Worthy Matron.

The last half of her life was spent on cattle farms in McDonald County, Missouri, and near Siloam Springs, Arkansas. Finally, she lived the last few years at Innisfree Retirement Center in Rogers, Arkansas. At each location she quickly found friends, bridge partners as well as church homes. In Siloam Springs she often enjoyed Travel Masters trips and Branson outings with friends. Her Sunday school class at the Siloam Springs First United Methodist Church was the highlight of her week. Her great-grandson Sullivan brought great joy in her last two years. She was always pleased to share pictures and looked forward to his visits.

She was preceded in death by her parents, husband of 73 years Woodrow in 2013, brother and sister-in-law Roland and Lynette Flock. Survivors include son Teddy Brown and wife Norma of Siloam Springs, Arkansas: grandchildren Teddi Gail Blagg and husband Donnie of Fayetteville, Arkansas, Craig Brown and wife Micca of Siloam Springs, Arkansas, and great grandson Sullivan Max Brown, along with many nieces and nephews.
