“ Recently, we went on a trip to pay tribute to our coach who helped make us who we are. I never thought it would be our last. When driving back, you asked me if I would go back right now and do it again, I told you there was not chance. I would on the other hand go back to when we were young and skipping elementary school and spitting sunflower seeds with you at the sale barn. Catching crawfish in your Grandpa's creek and having grandma fry them and make Chocolate gravy. I would go back to bucking bales all night until we found the last one and then jump in the river at Fisher Ford. Go back to being President and Vice president of the FFA. Calling codes out over the intercom at Wal-mart that only you, I, James, Paul and Layton understood. Buying goats, calves, cows, pigs, anything breathing on Friday night at Leach and selling it on Saturday night at Bentonville. Going Stag to the Prom with you and Craig. Helping you put the magazine in Woodys truck that got him in trouble with his Dad. Helping Woody make brownies before the trip to National horse judging contest that he fed you for the bus ride. Meeting you in Jay on Thursday nights for a game of pool. Giggling at Euchie with Kenny even though you can't tell the difference in a bone fish and a bass. Going to Tulsa and taking Pinky for a walk at every rest stop. Inviting you over even though I knew Edward G Robinson was going to poop in Amy's plants. Waking up to you on my couch and a garage full of stop signs and somehow you met my neighbor and got him involved. Asking you to be my best Man again even though you showed up with a dancing banana. Following you and Craig to Connors state, listening to you when you pushed me to go on and finish at OSU. Inviting you over even though Seth walked around scared you would de-pants him. Letting Seth go to work for you and you paying him to eat Havanera sauce. Yes, Jamie I would do it all again with you.
