“ Ken was something else. In a good way! If you ever met the guy, it wouldn't take long before you got to talking :) The man was well travelled for a self- proclaimed “small town boy.” He knew a little about a lot of things. He would tell you stories about what Siloam springs used to be like, from the economy to the scenery. Loved Arkansas. He would frequently talk about his life, his endeavors, his views, his thoughts, his opinions- and boy, he had lots of those-the way you would expect someone who has lived a full life would. Far from perfect, but a perfectly fine man if you ask me.

Most importantly, Ken was God fearing man. At some point in his conversation no doubt, he would find a way to minister the gospel to you. I hope that at least one or more souls that was lucky enough to come across his path, that he somehow was able to save via his love and knowledge of the Bible.

Very insightful, very loving, very honest. I'd say those are the words the best describe Ken. Maybe stubborn, but it was well earned and hard to argue with, when you meet a man that his lived his kind of life. Ken, I knew you are still here on Earth as the Bible says we are just sleeping when we die. But there will come a time when God comes again, and When that time comes, despite where I'll be headed, I hope I get to see you smile one more time, cancer free, and looking better than ever!

“ He was a friend of ours at the hunger and thirst ministries. He like to talk about what's going on in the world. I'm hurt really bad that he's gone. Ken is my best friends and now I'm happy he not surfing and he's in a better place.
