“ I have so many memories, some seem so funny to me now but boy they were a big deal when we were kids. Mary was always very prissy, concerned about how she looked and terrified of being in embarrases at school, I on the other hand was the total a d complete opposite. For one thing I never understood why somebody who in my opinion was absolutely beautiful and couldn't look ugly if she tried, spent so much time worrying about it. Just didn't make a lot of spence to me, plus I was jealous of how pretty she was and she didn't much seem to appreciate it, and refused to be herself around other people , soooo, about every time I saw an opportunity to say or do something that I was sure would cause a total and complete meltdown, I made sure to do it. The best part was, while at school... No retaliation, she knew that could cause further embarrassment , when we got home, sometimes she beat the crap out of me, but in the moment , well worth it.it was t until we got older that I realized how much easier it was for me, she wished she could wake up and not care what people thought, just be herself, she told be that when she finally got to a point in life where she started doing that, she felt so free and happy, I guess deep down I just wanted her to be herself, it was good enough for me and I knew without a drought it would have been good enough for everybody else to... Anyway the worst time I got her at school, she waited until we got home and held me down on the ground and gridded her boney elbow in my back for like 30 min, she had been holding that in all day, I had a bruise the size if my knee for over a week, then she let me up , licked her hand and wiped it down the side of my face... Pretty sure I didn't mess with her for a while after that .. Doesn't sound that prissy does it, I'm sure the only thing that ever prevented her from getting me at school was the fear if messing up her hair lol love her so so much
