Tribute Wall

“ There are so many favorite memories but I am gonna go with a more recent memory and it was a little over a year ago the day me and him just hung out all day . It had been awhile sense we had done that and we drove around and did a few things then he decided he wanted to go play a game of pool so we did and of coarse he won then some other kid wanted to know if he wanted to play him for money and Robby convinced me to give him 5 dollars for the bet so I did but Robby ended up losing just barely though so then he wanted a rematch and I gave him 5 more dollars cuz this time he was sure he would win but he lost again the other kid just got lucky but Robby was a good sport about it lol then we played some other games and won some prizes to take home to Jace . It was just a good day spending time together robby was a very unique person he was just so kind hearted and caring and a fun person to be around he had a smile that that could cheer you up just by seeing it. He was very sensitive and could get his feelings hurt easy but he also cared about other peoples feelings , I remember one night when he was 16 he came with a old lady that he found she had alzhimers and was lost So he brought her home with tears in his eyes saying we got to help her and of course we did we found her family. Thats just the type person Robby was and I miss him more every day I still cant believe he is really gone I would give anything just to talk to him again and to hear his voice and see his smile but he is in heaven now and someday we will all be together again. R.I.P Robby
